10 IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
11 FOR THE DISTRICT OF ARIZONA

12 United States of America,
13
14 Plaintiff,

15 v.

16 Abdul Malik Abdul Kareem,
17
18 Defendant.

No. CR-15-00707-01-PHX-SRB

RESPONSE TO MOTION TO COMPEL DISCLOSURE RE RE-SENTENCING

19 The United States, through undersigned counsel, respectfully requests the Court
20 deny defendant Abdul Malik Abdul Kareem's Motion to Compel Disclosure re Re-21 Sentencing (CR 701). Defense counsel is seeking early disclosure of identifying 22 information regarding the government's prisoner witnesses without providing any 23 safeguards to protect their safety. Providing full Giglio and Jencks Act discovery regarding 24 the prisoner witnesses without appropriate safeguards will unduly place them in grave 25 danger in the prison setting.

26 At the status hearing on July 29, 2021, the Court encouraged the parties to come to 27 an agreement on a protective order so the government could provide more detailed 28

1 discovery to the defense that would reveal the identities of the prisoner witnesses.<sup>1</sup> (CR 2 700.) Both government and defense counsel indicated they were amenable to entering into 3 such an agreement. The Court noted that if the parties were unable to agree on the terms 4 of a protective order, it would allow the government to disclose information revealing the 5 identities of the prisoner witnesses “very late.”

6 Government counsel conferred telephonically with defense counsel on at least three 7 occasions between the date of the hearing and the date of the instant Motion to Compel.
8 Aside from referring to the original protective order in this case (CR 44), which related to 9 the identities of juveniles and personally identifying information of third parties in the case
10 and was more concerned with privacy rights than safety, defense counsel did not propose 11 limitations that would protect the safety of the prisoner witnesses.<sup>2</sup>

12 Having not received a satisfactory proposal from defense counsel, on Friday, 13 September 10, 2021, undersigned counsel emailed a draft motion and protective order for 14 defense counsel to review. (Attachment 1.) In the email, undersigned counsel expressed 15 the government’s desire to provide earlier discovery regarding the prisoner witnesses with 16 restrictions on dissemination to protect them from the grave risk of harm they face in the 17 prison setting. Specifically, the government offered to provide earlier disclosure of “their 18 criminal histories, any relevant portions of their prison disciplinary histories, their cell
19 locations (and Kareem’s) during the times they were housed at FCI Florence with Mr.
20 Kareem, and other information that would be pertinent under Giglio.” (Attachment 2.)

21 Without further contact, Kareem filed the instant motion the evening of September 22 10, 2021.

25 <sup>1</sup> The Court also referenced the defense’s desire to interview certain government witnesses 26 from ATF prior to sentencing. The defense has not identified which witnesses it seeks to interview. See Doc. 701-1.

27 <sup>2</sup> The parties later informally agreed to include additional sensitive disclosure within the 28 terms of the protective order. The protection of that information likewise was not related to witness safety.

1       A. The Materials Sought are not Rule 16 Materials

2           Kareem cites Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 16 in support of his request. By 3 its own terms, Rule 16 applies only to items that are material to preparation of the defense, 4 items the government intends to use in its case-in-chief at trial, or items obtained from or 5 belonging to the defendant. Fed. R. Crim. P. 16(a)(1)(E). The items Kareem seeks do not 6 fall within the scope of Rule 16.

7           First, the items are not material to preparation of the defense. The United States 8 Supreme Court has construed “defense” in Rule 16(a)(1)(E)(i) to mean defense against the 9 government’s case-in-chief at trial. United States v. Armstrong, 517 U.S. 456, 462-63 10 (1996) (defendant sought expansive discovery of other criminal investigations to support 11 motion to dismiss based on selective prosecution of African-American defendants). In this 12 context, the Supreme Court explained that Rule 16(a)(1)(E)(i) authorizes disclosure only 13 of those items that are helpful to rebutting the elements of the crimes charged. None of the 14 items relating to the prisoner witnesses relate to the elements of the offenses for which 15 Kareem stands convicted.

16           Second, the items Kareem seeks relate to sentencing, not the government’s case-in-17 chief at trial. Third, the items were not obtained from and are not the property of Kareem.

18           Even assuming Kareem has made a threshold showing that the items fall within the 19 scope of Rule 16, discovery under Rule 16 is bounded in additional ways. For example, 20 Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 16(a)(2) specifically exempts from disclosure all 21 “reports, memoranda, or other internal government documents made by an attorney for the 22 government or other government agent in connection with investigating or prosecuting the 23 case.” Subsection (a)(2) further exempts from disclosure “statements made by prospective 24 government witnesses,” except as otherwise authorized in 18 U.S.C. § 3500. Id.

25           The Ninth Circuit analyzed the scope of this exemption in United States v. Fort, 472
26 F.3d 1106, 1120-21 (9th Cir. 2007). The Court construed “government agent” to include 27 “non-federal personnel whose work contributes to a federal criminal case,” and “case,” in 28 turn, to encompass an investigation that culminates in the federal prosecution of the

1 defendant. Id. at 1110-21 (holding Rule 16(a)(2) exempted from disclosure local agency 2 reports created prior to federal involvement but relinquished to federal prosecutors to 3 support a unified prosecution of defendants for the same criminal activity that was the 4 subject of the local investigation); cf. Armstrong, 517 U.S. at 462-63 (characterizing Rule 5 16(a)(2) as precluding discovery of “government work product in connection with [the 6 defendant’s] case”); cf. also United States v. Cedano-Arellano, 332 F.3d 568, 571 (9th Cir.
7 2003) (law enforcement canine training materials and records not protected from disclosure 8 under Rule 16(a)(2) because “they were not made in connection with investigating or 9 prosecuting this or any other case” (emphasis added)). Thus, even items material to 10 preparing the defense may be withheld, so long as they are not exculpatory, pursuant to 11 Rule 16(a)(2).

12 B. The Materials Sought are not Exculpatory

13 Under Brady v. Maryland, 373 U.S. 83 (1963), the government must disclose 14 information favorable to the accused that is material either to guilt or to punishment.
15 United States v. Lucas, 841 F.3d 796, 807 (9th Cir. 2016). None of the materials Kareem
16 seeks would serve to exculpate Kareem or mitigate his culpability. Therefore, the materials 17 do not qualify as Brady material in that sense. However, some of the materials relate to 18 prior witness statements and/or impeachment of the prisoner witnesses and are 19 discoverable on those bases.

20 C. Some Materials Sought are Within the Scope of the Jencks Act and/or Giglio

21 The Jencks Act, 18 U.S.C. § 3500, requires the government to disclose previous 22 statements of its witnesses after each witness has testified. The text of § 3500 is clear:

23 In any criminal prosecution brought by the United States, no statement or 24 report in the possession of the United States which was made by a 25 Government witness or prospective Government witness (other than the defendant) shall be the subject of subpoena, discovery, or inspection until said witness has testified on direct examination in the trial of the case.

26 18 U.S.C. § 3500(a). See United States v. Taylor, 802 F.2d 1108, 1118 (9th Cir. 1986)
27 (order requiring early disclosure of statements made by prospective government witnesses 28 “was itself inconsistent with the express provision of the Jencks Act and therefore unenforceable”). Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 26.2 mirrors the Jencks Act and imposes no additional production burden on the government.

Although not required to do so until after the witnesses testify, the government previously disclosed the written statements of two of the prisoner witnesses – a letter from Witness 1 and handwritten notes from Witness 2. The only redactions were to portions of the statements that would identify the witnesses. In addition, the government disclosed reports of interviews for the three prisoner witnesses, again redacted to protect the identities of the witnesses. The government also disclosed Kareem’s mail, phone, and email logs from FCI Florence, and reports analyzing his recorded calls and non-attorney email messages.

Absent a satisfactory protective order, the government further intends to produce the following materials in advance of the sentencing hearing, with redactions to protect those witnesses’ identities:

- Transcripts of recorded interviews of two of the prisoner witnesses (the third witness’s interview was not recorded)
- Reports of attorney-conducted interviews of the three witnesses
- Criminal histories and related Giglio material
- Relevant portions of their prison disciplinary histories
- 302 reports (if they exist, awaiting responsive information) to document the FBI Denver Field Office’s closure of its investigation

The reports previously disclosed to the defense note the prisoner witnesses desired to have their sentences reduced. As documented in forthcoming reports, undersigned counsel informed the witnesses that the U.S. Attorney’s offices in the districts that handled their prosecutions have stated that they would be amenable to filing Rule 35 motions if the witnesses provide truthful testimony, but no promises or agreements have been made in exchange for their testimony

Additional materials in the government’s possession would negatively impact the witnesses’ credibility, and therefore fall within the scope of Giglio. Again, the government

1 has offered to provide that information to the defense well in advance of the hearing, 2 subject to a protective order that adequately protects the safety of the prisoner witnesses.

3 D. Balancing Kareem's Need for Disclosure Against the Risk of Harm to the Witnesses

4 The value of the Giglio material regarding the prisoner witnesses is likely to be 5 significantly less in the circumstances of this hearing than it would be in the context of a 6 jury trial. The defense and the Court are aware that the prisoner witnesses are federal 7 inmates who have been in custody for at least two years. It goes without saying they all 8 have felony convictions. Further, common experience suggests prison inmates would 9 desire to obtain earlier release, giving them an incentive to provide information to the 10 government in order to achieve that result. Cf. United States v. Bernal-Obeso, 989 F.2d 11 331, 333-35 (9th Cir. 1993) (recounting at length the perils associated with cooperators and 12 prison witnesses while noting criminal justice system could not adequately function 13 without such witnesses in certain cases). The Court, as the trier of fact in this instance, 14 already is aware of the credibility issues that accompany prisoner and cooperator
15 testimony. Specific information about the prisoner witnesses' reputations for truthfulness 16 and criminal histories is unlikely to have significant additional impact in these 17 circumstances. Therefore, lengthy and robust investigation into their histories by outside 18 investigators to develop additional impeachment information borders on pointless.

19 On the other hand, the witnesses, as prisoners, face a grave risk of harm when their 20 identities are revealed along with their status as cooperating witnesses. See United States
21 v. Doe, 870 F.3d 991, 999-1000 (discussing threats of harm to cooperators in the prison 22 setting and their families) (citing Comm. on Ct. Admin. & Case Mgmt. of the Judicial 23 Conference of the U.S., Interim Guidance for Cooperator Information (June 30, 2016), 24 available at http://www.uscourts.gov/sites/default/files/2016-09-criminal-agenda\_book\_
25 0. pdf). Disclosing their status prematurely places them at unnecessary risk in advance of 26 the re-sentencing hearing. Disclosing their status prematurely also risks their becoming 27 unavailable to testify. Thus, an appropriate balance should be struck between Kareem's 28 need for information and the government's interest in protecting the safety and availability

1 of the prisoner witnesses. See United States v. Roviato, 353 U.S. 53, 60-61 (1957)
2 (defendant's need for information must be balanced against the value of ensuring the safety 3 of informants).

4 To balance these interests, the government anticipates disclosing the Giglio and 5 identifying materials on October 15, 2021. This will give the defense time to review the 6 materials, perform additional public-record searches to follow up on specific items deemed 7 worthy of further review, and to prepare additional questions for cross-examination beyond 8 whatever questions they already will have prepared.

9 E. Conclusion

10 Based on the foregoing, the United States respectfully requests the Court deny 11 Kareem's Motion to Compel Disclosure re Re-Sentencing (CR 701).

12 Respectfully submitted this 16th day of September, 2021.
